STATISTICS OF PUBLIC, SOCIETY, AND SCHOOL LIBRARIES, 1923

INTRODUCTION

As a part of its function of providing information about all kinds of educational activities, the Bureau of Education, beginning with its report for 1870, has periodically collected and published statistics of public, society, and school libraries, recently at intervals of about five years. The last preceding compilation, covering the year 1913, was issued as Bulletin, 1915, No. 25. Various special circumstances, particularly the interruption caused by the World War, have delayed the preparation of the present bulletin from 1918, when it regularly would have appeared, until the expiration of an entire decade since the collection of the last preceding library statistics.

The form schedules for collecting the information for the present bulletin were distributed to an address list of about 18,000 public, society, and school libraries, which was made up by the bureau. To many of these libraries it was found necessary to send two or more requests before replies could be obtained. The number of replies suitable for tabulation received for 1923 from libraries having 1,000 volumes and over was 8,544, while 2,569 replies came from smaller libraries, making a total of 11,113 libraries reporting. Of these, the first group reported a total of 126,914,414 volumes; the second, 1,437,559 volumes. Of the 8,544 libraries, 4,855 contained from 1,000 to 4,999 volumes, and 3,689 had 5,000 volumes or more. The returns for 1913, as compared with those for 1923, showed 8,302 libraries having 1,000 volumes or more, of which 5,453 contained from 1,000 to 4,999 volumes, and 2,849 had 5,000 volumes or more. The 1923 returns, accordingly, show a decrease from 1913 of 598 in the number of libraries reporting between 1,000 and 4,999 volumes and an increase of 840 libraries having 5,000 volumes or more. Many libraries having less than 5,000 volumes in 1913 had grown beyond that limit by 1923; also a large number of the smaller libraries failed to send in returns for 1923 in time for use, and it was not found practicable to wait longer on these libraries or to make additional efforts to obtain information from them. In actual fact, the indications point to a substantial addition to the number of smaller libraries during the decade 1913-1923. On the other hand, it is believed that nearly all libraries in the United States having 5,000 volumes or more in 1923 are listed in this bulletin.

The number of libraries reporting statistics to the bureau for 1908, which were published as Bulletin, 1909, No. 5, was similarly incomplete as compared with 1903. The number of libraries having 1,000 to 4,999 volumes reporting in 1908 was only 3,342, as against 4,841 for 1903; the libraries having 5,000 volumes or more in 1908 numbered 2,298, as against 2,028 reporting for 1903; making the total number of libraries reporting 1,000 volumes or more in 1908 to be 5,640, as against 6,869 for 1903. The introduction to Bulletin, 1909, No. 5, containing the 1908 library statistics, states that it was at that time believed that the number of public, society, and school libraries having 1,000 volumes or more was in excess of 8,000, and that there were certainly more than 1,000 libraries of 1,000 to 5,000 volumes from which no returns for 1908 were received. A similar observation seems to apply to the incomplete list of libraries having from 1,000 to 4,999 volumes reporting for the present bulletin.

The earlier statistical reports issued by the Bureau of Education included the names and details for all libraries reporting over 300 volumes. In 1893, libraries of less than 1,000 volumes were omitted from the published lists, and by 1908 the increase in the number of libraries made it necessary to limit the published list to libraries having 5,000 volumes or more, which plan was also followed in 1913. In order to widen the scope of the present bulletin and to give deserved recognition to the important service rendered by many of the smaller libraries, the limit for libraries listed in the following pages has been lowered to 3,000 volumes. The present list accordingly gives detailed statistics for 5,080 public, society, and school libraries having 3,000 volumes or more. The plan of the tables in this bulletin, as to the items of information admitted, has also been thoroughly reorganized from the method employed in earlier compilations in this series.

The 5,080 libraries of 3,000 volumes or more, whose statistics are given in the following tables, had 2,844 branches, and reported an aggregate of 120,841,060 volumes. Additions amounting to 6,565,652 volumes were made by 4,335 of the libraries, and 3,110 libraries reported 13,756,738 borrowers' cards in force. The issues of books for use outside of the library, as reported by 3,199 libraries, aggregated 207,709,650 volumes. The number of libraries reported as entirely free to the public was 2,788, while 1,167 were free for reference. Of the 5,080 public, society, and school libraries, 2,754 received $28,010,202 from direct taxation or public appropriations. The aggregate income of 3,773 libraries was $44,686,394. The amount expended for books by 3,816 libraries was $8,683,144 for the year; 3,375 libraries paid $21,974,624 for salaries, the aggregate expenditure of 4,087 libraries being $40,326,522.

The number of libraries in the United States and the number of volumes contained therein have been growing constantly for many years, and this growth has been especially rapid since the opening of the present century. In 1903 the number of libraries of all kinds reporting 5,000 volumes or more was 2,028, which by 1913 had grown to be 2,849, an increase of 821 during the decade from 1903 to 1913. In 1923 the libraries reporting 5,000 volumes or more numbered 3,689, or a gain of 840 since 1913. The number of volumes contained in the libraries mentioned increased in a greater ratio from 43,765,677 in 1903 to 75,112,935 in 1913, or 72 per cent, and on to 115,688,909 in 1923, or 54 per cent since 1913. The number of books in libraries of 1,000 volumes or more per 100 people in the United States in 1903 was 68; in 1908, 72; in 1913, 89; and in 1923, 115, showing a great gain in the number of volumes available to the population.

With reference to the semicentennial anniversary of the inauguration of the modern library movement in the United States, which is observed in 1926, it may be useful for purposes of comparison with the present status to summarize briefly here some items of library statistics collected by the Bureau of Education in 1876, which were published in its special monograph on "Public libraries in the United States of America; their history, condition, and management," and supplemented in its report for 1876 (p. cxxiv). The total number of public, society, and school libraries numbering 300 volumes or more reporting for 1876 was 3,723, containing 12,376,473 volumes. Other details were as follows:

Total yearly additions (1,556 libraries reporting).....	441, 722
Number of books issued to borrowers (784 libraries reporting).....	9, 065, 178
Yearly income (879 libraries reporting).....	$1, 329, 703
Yearly expenditures for books, periodicals, and binding (814 libraries reporting).....	$572, 477
Yearly expenditures for salaries and incidental expenses (679 libraries reporting).....	$691, 324

Although these statistics of 1876 are incomplete, they are sufficient to show, when compared with present conditions, that the progress in library facilities made in America during the past half century has been very great.
